第一节（共 15 小题；每小题 2 分，满分 30 分）

A

A shopkeeper sent his son to learn about the secret of happiness from the wisest man in the world. The boy walked a long way, and finally came upon the beautiful castle where the wise man lived.

On entering the main room of the castle, the boy was quite surprised: tradesmen coming and going, people chatting in the corners, and a small orchestra playing soft music. The wise man talked with everyone, and the boy had to wait for two hours before it was his turn.

The wise man listened carefully to the boy's explanation of why he had come, but told him that he didn't have time just then to explain the secret of happiness. He suggested that the boy look around the palace and return in two hours.

"Meanwhile, I want to ask you to do something," said the wise man, handing the boy a teaspoon that held two drops of oil. "As you wander around, carry this spoon with you without allowing the oil to spill."

The boy began to walk up and down stairs of the palace, keeping his eyes fixed on the spoon. After two hours, he returned to the wise man.

"Well," asked the wise man, "Did you see the Persian tapestries(挂毯) in the hall? Did you see the garden that took the master gardener ten years to create?" The boy was embarrassed, and replied that he had observed nothing. His only concern had been not to spill the oil.

"Then go back and observe the wonders of my world," said the wise man. The boy picked up the spoon and returned to his exploration of the palace. This time he observed all of the works of art on the ceilings and the walls. When he returned, he described in detail everything he had seen.

"But where are the drops of oil?" asked the wise man. Looking down at the spoon he held, the boy saw that the oil was gone.

"Well, there is only one piece of advice I can give you," said the wise man. "The secret of happiness is to see all the wonders of the world, and never to forget the drops of oil on the spoon."

Swimming is one of those activities that can be learned early in life. Little children can learn to swim as soon as they walk. In fact, you need the same skills in walking as in swimming. However, I believe that five is the best age to learn. By five or six, a child knows fear of water, a very important thing to know. It's wise to be afraid, to recognize true danger. Young ones understand that the water can sometimes be very dangerous.

To really benefit from swimming, every swimmer should learn, as soon as possible, these four basic strokes(泳姿): butterfly, backstroke, breaststroke, and crawl. I feel that one of these--the breaststroke--is different from the others, since some young swimmers use this stroke naturally, without any training.

In swimming there are certain rules every swimmer should follow:

◆ Never swim alone! No matter how good you are in the water, don't risk drowning(淹死) by swimming alone. If you swim by yourself, with no life guards or friends with you, you may get into trouble.

◆ Don't go beyond your abilities. Most swimmers know enough not to swim too far from the bank or the beach. Showing off by doing dangerous tricks is no good. Swim safely and you will continue to swim and alive.

◆ Don't smoke. Swimming depends on a healthy body; good lungs are part of it.

◆ Work at any activity that builds muscles.

64. Little children can learn to swim when _____.
 A. they can talk
 B. they start walking
 C. they have no fear of the water
 D. they are five or six years old
65. The author believes that fear of water is _____.
 A. stupid B. dangerous C. smart D. silly
66. According to the passage, you should not swim alone because _____.
 A. the water is too cold

- B. it will do harm to your lungs
- C. something in the water might attack
- D. you might drown

D

Have you noticed how many nouns are being used as verbs? We all use them, often without noticing what we're doing.

I was arranging to meet someone for dinner last week, and I said “I'll pencil it in my diary”, and my friend said “You must ink it in”, meaning that it was a firm arrangement!

Many of these new verbs are linked to new technology. An obvious example is the word fax. We all got used to sending and receiving faxes, and then soon started talking about faxing something and promising we'd fax it immediately. Then along came email, and we were soon all emailing each other madly. How did we do without it? I can hardly imagine life without my daily emails.

Also, my computer and its software have produced another couple of new verbs. On my computer I can bookmark those pages from the World Wide Web that I think I'll want to look at again. And I can do the same thing on my PC, but there I don't bookmark; I favorite—coming from “favorite pages”, so the verb is derived (派生) from an adjective not a noun this time.

Now my children bought me a mobile phone, known simply as a mobile and I have to learn yet more new verbs. I can message someone, that is, I can leave a message for them on their phone. Or I can text them, write a few words suggesting when and where to meet, for example. How long will it be before I can mobile them, that is, phone them using my mobile? I haven't heard that verb yet, but I'm sure I will soon. Perhaps I'll start using it myself!

67. “I'll pencil it in my diary” in the second paragraph probably means _____.

- | | |
|--|------------------------------------|
| A. it was a firm arrangement | B. it was an uncertain arrangement |
| C. the arrangement is written as a diary | D. he prefers a pencil to a pen |

68. A website address can be easily found if it has been_____.

- | | | | |
|------------|-------------|--------------|-----------|
| A. emailed | B. messaged | C. favorited | D. texted |
|------------|-------------|--------------|-----------|

69. Which of the following has not been used as a verb?

- | | | | |
|------------|---------|----------|-----------|
| A. message | B. text | C. email | D. mobile |
|------------|---------|----------|-----------|

70. The best title for this passage is_____.

- | | |
|-------------------------|---------------------------------|
| A. New Verbs from Nouns | B. New Technology and New words |
| C. The English language | D. Technology and Language |
